

MAKEDA

RANDALL ROBINSON

“In Robinson’s majestic prose and sweeping historical vision, the tongues of Virginia Woolf, Gabriel García Márquez, and Toni Morrison blend to remind us that we can renew our souls in the eyes of ancestors who return to us in whatever way our lives demand.”

—Michael Eric Dyson, author of Can You Hear Me Now?

